2016 CALENDAR

YOU CAN YOU SHOULD
WE CAN HELP

Our vision is that every Carolina student can have a global opportunity.

We believe that all students should enhance their education and increase their employability through global experiences.

All students are unique and face their own individual challenges, but we can help break the barriers that stand between a student and the world.

Let's go.

CENTER FOR GLOBAL INITIATIVES

This calendar is an annual publication of the Center for Global Initiatives at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. It was produced by Beth-Ann Kutchma, designed by Tripp Tuttle and printed without the use of state funds.

Re-imagining the great, global, public research university

Thanks to private gifts from alumni, parents, students and friends, the Chancellor's Global Education Fund makes possible UNC's mission to serve the state of North Carolina, the nation and the world. Annual gifts to the Fund give University leaders the flexibility to provide funding to students, faculty and programs in support of Carolina's top global priorities.

global.unc.edu/give

Double Your Gift For a second year, Peter McMillan '81 has promised to match gifts up to a total of $25,000. Increase your gift to the Global Education Fund, and Peter will match that increase. Or, become a donor today and he'll match your new gift dollar for dollar.

“Like President Graham 100 years ago, we are again at a moment that calls for re-imagining the great, global, public research university. We must have courage to re-define our role in a rapidly changing world. We must be bold to rise above our already-great expectations. And we must be fearless to do all this in spite of the constraints placed upon us.”

– Chancellor Carol L. Folt

The Impact of Your Gifts Divided by the Sea

During the greatest migration crisis in Europe since World War II, UNC's Vimy Global Team traveled to Reggio Calabria in southern Italy to document the complex struggles of both the migrants arriving on boats and the local population's response.

“We spent four weeks filming, interviewing migrants and locals, gathering their stories. This opportunity gave us the chance to gain a deeper understanding and an intimate look at the crisis,” said Vimy Team member Gabriela Arp '16 M.A.

Since their return, Team member William Moose '16 M.C.R.P. has delved into creating interactive visualizations of the migration crisis. The Team has collaborated with assistant professor Steven King and undergraduate students Clinton King '17 and Andrea Roberson '16 in the School of Media and Journalism to develop an educational website to host the multimedia stories and visualizations. This website launches in February 2016. Check it out at: DividedByTheSea.com

“We had the luxury – thanks to the Vimy and the Chancellor's Global Education Fund – to get to know individual people on the ground and truly immerse ourselves in the community.”

– Andrea Patiño Contreras '16 M.A.

“The award gave us an opportunity to apply the skills from the classroom to a real-world reporting environment and allowed us to build deep relationships with people experiencing the migration crisis firsthand.”

– Gabriela Arp '16 M.A.

ABOUT THE VIMY

Inspired by UNC alumnus Peter McMillan '81, the Vimy Global Team Award is given annually to an interdisciplinary team of students to pursue a research or service project. Funding comes from private gifts to the Chancellor's Global Education Fund.

2016 Vimy applications are due February 10, 2016. Learn more at cgi.unc.edu/vimy

On June 22, a Singaporean ship, managed by a Danish shipping company, rescued two boats off the Libyan coast with 221 migrants, mostly from West Africa, and took them to the port of Reggio Calabria. Over 25,000 migrants came through this port between June 2014 and June 2015.

After a long day of filming, Vimy Team members Arp and Contreras pause for a light-hearted photo, still wearing the face masks required by the migrant processing facility.

CHANCELLOR'S CHOICE

Each year, Chancellor Carol L. Folt selects a photograph from the Carolina Global Photography Competition that she finds especially globally relevant and artistically distinctive. As chancellor, she encourages infusing global dimensions throughout the university's teaching, research and service activities. This year, she found three photographs particularly compelling among all of the entries.

ELEGANCE IN RESEARCH

Isla Colón, Panamá
A French-born researcher tosses a gill net at dusk to catch sardines. She is one of 20 international scientists in residence at the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute's Bocas Marine Station, a confluence of Italian, French, Panamanian and American culture.

“The movement, beauty and serenity captured in this photograph are so striking. As a female environmental scientist, this image reminded me of my own field research investigating the effects of mercury and arsenic in our waterways and food systems. It is exciting to see researchers so passionate about water research; they will truly make a difference in helping us protect our natural resources for future generations.”

THE BEAUTY OF SIMPLICITY

Marina Bay, Singapore
It is always refreshing to see a taste of simplicity in the complex matrix of technology and architecture within Marina Bay, Singapore. There is beauty in something as simple as riding a bike in an area that is filled with high-tech transportation.

Navina Venugopal '17
CARY, NORTH CAROLINA
Geology
College of Arts and Sciences

“The strong silhouettes, architectural details, contrast and layering of this photograph work well together. The photograph was taken during one of UNC's unique study abroad programs, the UNC faculty-led Southeast Asia Summer Program (SEAS), which provides up to 25 students with an eight-week course of study in Southeast Asia during the summer following their first year at Carolina. The program was designed for students during this early stage of their academic careers so that it could influence their academic paths – and we're thrilled that the program inspires many participants to study abroad again.”

NOT YOUR MAMA'S KITCHEN

Hanoi, Vietnam
The colors and smells of a makeshift kitchen come to life on the bustling streets of Hanoi, Vietnam.

Joseph Seguin '17 M.P.H.

“The texture and rich colors immediately caught my eye. The scene is unexpected and raises a number of provocative questions – who cooks here and for whom are they cooking? What are they making? Where do they source their ingredients? We all eat, but understanding the food on our plates – and how it got there – requires a layered, multi-angled look at food systems that our current 2015-2017 university-wide academic theme, ‘Food for All: Global and Local Perspectives,’ encourages.”

Diplomat in Residence's Choice THE HAGIA SOPHIA: JUXTAPOSITION

Istanbul, Turkey
Once the center of Orthodox Christianity, and then the principle mosque of Istanbul during the Ottoman Empire, the Hagia Sophia is an important monument to cultural exchange.

Hank Hester '19
CHARLOTTE, NORTH CAROLINA
Linguistics
College of Arts and Sciences

“Every trip my wife and I have made to Istanbul is capped by a visit to Hagia Sophia, arguably the most wondrous site in a phenomenally beautiful, historically and culturally-rich city. This photograph of the museum-mosque-church's interior captures the real reason we're drawn to Hagia Sophia: its display of cultural and religious tolerance; the blending of different beliefs in one sacred location. Even the 9th Century pagan Viking runes discovered in Hagia Sophia speak to the great depth of human experience gathered under one exquisite dome.”

– Rich Jaworski

EMBARK CAROLINA

EMBARK.UNC.EDU

LAUNCHING SPRING 2016

Embark Carolina is a new, dynamic resource in the university's effort to open access to global opportunities so that more diverse students can pursue more diverse experiences. Its two main features help students explore every region of the world, regardless of their background, discipline or perspective:

- 1) GLOBAL GUIDE is a student-focused how-to manual on the steps to take to find a global opportunity that fits specific needs, interests and concerns.
- 2) GLOBAL SEARCH helps students identify awards, scholarships and fellowships to support them in pursuing a global opportunity.

Global Take Off students pose for a photo with Afro-Puerto Rican dancers, musicians and storytellers in Loiza, Puerto Rico.

GLOBAL TAKE OFF: PUERTO RICO

Global Take Off: Puerto Rico provides full funding for students to participate in an interactive, four-day, faculty-led trip to Puerto Rico over Fall Break. The program is a collaboration of the Center for Global Initiatives, the Institute for the Study of the Americas and the Sonja Haynes Stone Center for Black Culture and History, and it targets first year and new transfer students who have limited or no global travel experience and who have demonstrated financial need. The program, funded through 2019, is made possible by a generous donation from alumna Maribel Carrion '77, '86 M.B.A., in memory of her sister, Marisela, who was also an alumna.

"I viewed this opportunity as a gate into the future that I desire and deserve."

PASSPORT TO GO!

Passport to GO! provides the first passport to first-year and new transfer students with high financial need. With funding from the Global Education Fund, the Center for Global Initiatives launched this program in 2012 providing 15 students with their first passport. Since then, with continued support from the Global Education Fund and a seed grant from UNC's Parent Council, the program has expanded to serve almost 200 students.
